Processing Information: The Barbara Starfield Collection was organized and catalogued by Linda Klouzal and Alyssa Perkinson in 2013-2015 with assistance from student assistants Tony Bai, Neal Billig, Dana Ettinger, and Barbara Holt. The project was supported by a Cataloging Hidden Special Collections and Archives grant from The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, through a program administered by the Council on Library and Information Resources (CLIR). Phoebe Evans Letocha served as the grant's Principal Investigator at the Alan Mason Chesney Medical Archives. After the conclusion of the grant project, the folders were rearranged in 2015 by Neal Billig and Barbara Holt according to the arrangement plan. In 2023 Allison Fischbach began processing the digital files.

Collection Overview

Extent: 98.5 cubic feet
Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Administrative/Biographical History:

Barbara Starfield was born in 1932 to a family of academics in Brooklyn, New York. She received her BA from Swarthmore College in 1954. Upon receiving her MD from the State University of New York, Downstate Medical Center in 1959, she came to the Johns Hopkins Hospital for her pediatrics residency. She received her MPH from the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health in 1963, with a focus on epidemiology. Starfield spent her entire professional career at Johns Hopkins. In 1963, she began working at The Johns Hopkins Hospital Harriet Lane Clinic as the Medical Director of the Pediatric Medical Care Clinic and of the Community Nursing Project. It was here that she met Vicente Navarro and Kerr White, pioneers of health services research and primary care medicine, both of whom would be close colleagues throughout her career. In 1965, Starfield became an instructor in the Department of Public Health Administration within the School of Hygiene and Public Health, where she rose from assistant professor in 1966 to associate professor in 1969, and full professor in 1975. From 1975 to 1994, she was the head of the Division of Health Policy within the department of Health Services Administration, later Health Policy and Management. Starfield was named University Distinguished Service Professor in 1994. She also held a joint appointment in Pediatrics in the School of Medicine.

Over the course of her career, Starfield came to be known as the "Grand Lady" of primary care. She authored more than 400 publications and trained 150 people directly, with teaching comprising a significant aspect of her working life. Her paper, "Is US Health Really the Best in the World?" reflects her concerns about the American health care system. Her books have become seminal works in the field including, The Effectiveness of Medical Care: Validating

Clinical Wisdom, 1985; Primary Care: Concept, Evaluation, and Policy, 1992, known as “the book” for the field of primary care and published in five languages; and, Policy and Primary Care: Balancing Health Needs, Services, and Technology, 1998. In 1996, she helped to found the Johns Hopkins’ Primary Care Policy Center (PCPC) and served as its Director. The PCPC trains health care professionals and conducts research on health care policy and on primary care delivery services, particularly for underserved populations.

Starfield made major contributions to the field of health services research. She began her career witnessing the health disparities that exist for children in Baltimore and went on to become a leader in efforts to measure health services and inequity. To that end, she created three key tools throughout the course of her career. Along with Anne Riley, she developed the Child Health and Illness Profile (CHIP), a comprehensive assessment of health and functioning for children and adolescents intended to “characterize the potential for resilience, risk avoidance, future health and achievement.” Starfield was also central to the development of Ambulatory Care Groups (ACGs) that is used worldwide for measuring morbidity burden of patient populations based on disease patterns, age and gender. The Primary Care Assessment Tools (PCAT) is a set of measurement tools designed to evaluate the quality of states’ primary care services, particularly for children.

Starfield travelled extensively researching health systems, serving as a consultant to policy makers around the world, and collaborating on projects to promote primary care and understanding of inequities in health. She was a co-founder and the first President of the International Society for Equity in Health (ISEqH) and the founding editor of the organization’s International Journal for Equity in Health (JEqH). Over the course of her career, she won many awards and served in a leadership role at numerous scientific societies and on dozens of editorial boards. Starfield was married for 56 years to Neil A. (Tony) Holtzman, a pediatrician at Johns Hopkins and a genetics specialist, with whom she had 4 children.

Chronology: 1959-2011 - Johns Hopkins Hospital
1959-2011 - Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine
1962-1963, 1965-2011 - Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health

Scope and Content:

The Barbara Starfield collection spans her entire career and documents her extensive contributions to the field of Primary Care Research, including her leadership in carrying on the work of her early mentor Kerr White. Materials document her involvement in creating programs and courses at Johns Hopkins to train future researchers and policy makers in the fields of health care services and primary care research. Johns Hopkins institutional records include records for the Division of Health Care Organization, which Starfield headed at the School of Hygiene and Public Health. Included are files pertaining to her assessment tools, the Child Health and Illness Profile (CHIP), the Primary Care Assessment Tools (PCAT), and adjusted clinical groups (ACG). The collection documents the formation of the International Society for Equity in Health (ISEqH), which Starfield founded. Included are several boxes pertaining to Starfield’s extensive involvement in state, national, international, and professional organizations, as a member, leader, consultant, officer, program/project director, and on Advisory Boards and Advisory Panels. There are also records of Starfield’s testimony as an expert and representative of professional organizations before congressional hearings and court depositions.

There are numerous records from Starfield’s speaking engagements at conferences and symposium, as a keynote speaker, and as a visiting lecturer. There are also extensive records of Starfield’s international collaborative projects, including international research projects, conferences, journals, and her work as a consultant. Research files document her numerous research projects and publication files pertain to Starfield’s journal articles, editorials, book chapters, and books.

The collection contains biographical materials about Starfield and her family, including Starfield’s educational records, early training, materials pertaining to awards, honors, and tributes to her and her work; biographical sketches and CVs; personal correspondence; and family photographs. There are about .5 cubic foot of photographs and 8.18GB of electronic files.

Accruals Description: 2007-054, 2008-055, 2008-063, 2008-077, 2008-095, 2010-025, 2011-061, 2011-074, 2011-091, 2012-012, 2013-042, 2014-008

Custodial History:

Materials came from both the office and home of Barbara Starfield.

Archival Arrangement:

Boxes 1-53 were packed by Barbara Starfield and were numbered as she transferred them to the Medical Archives. Throughout the collection, Starfield inserted notes made while packing up materials for the archives, about the documents and her projects. Starfield later interfiled additional materials into the boxes so that related materials are together. Starfield's notes have been retained. After her death, boxes 54-76 were packed by Phoebe Evans Letocha as she cleaned out Starfield's office. Additional materials were transferred by her husband Neil Holtzman and her assistant Normalie Barton. Boxes were inventoried by Medical Archives processing staff, and then linked to the appropriate series and sub-series as identified. Folders were then rearranged according to the arrangement plan.

Language: Spanish, English, Portuguese

Conditions Governing Access Element:

Folder 3.2.7.3.07 - 3.2.7.3.09: Postgraduate (post doctoral) training in Health Services Research - 1989-2003

Extent: 3 folders

Scope and Content: Starfield was the initiator and first director of the Post Doctoral Training in Health Services Research project at Johns Hopkins University. The program was funded through fellowships from the National Center for Health Services Research (NCHSR) within the U. S. Department of Health and Human Services. These were National Research Service Awards (SRA) fellowships in health services research. The program lasted for several years and was targeted for postdocs, including physicians. The focus was on research in primary care issues, including, among other things, the development and application of measures to assess primary care and the availability, effectiveness, and quality of care for vulnerable populations (those with low-income, minorities, the elderly, and children). The Program was sponsored by the Department of Health Policy and Management within JHSPH, which was the site of the research training. It was a 2-year program. The objective of the program was to train students in developing competence in conducting independent research within a policy context. The main component of the training was a research project carried out under the guidance of a designated faculty mentor. This program was two to three years and included additional requirements that students take relevant coursework, work as a teaching assistant in a course involving research methods, and assist faculty on research related to one of the program's foci.

Materials include a brochure about the program; correspondence, including printed emails; the program plan; copies of grant applications; AHCPH NRSA Training Directors meeting minutes and HSR Training Grant Steering Committee meeting minutes; starfield's notes; and descriptions of studies conducted and of students and their projects. Materials are dated c. 1989-2003.

Series 6: External Institutional Affiliations Files

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: These materials document Starfield's extensive involvement with professional societies and organizations in fields related to her work. She served on committees and task forces, as a member, as a consultant, on advisory boards and in other leadership roles. Starfield also gave testimony as an expert witness before courts and congress. The series documents Starfield's extensive involvement in the Ambulatory Pediatric Association; the Institute of Medicine and National Research Council at the National Academy of sciences; and on advisory panels, national committees, and workgroups within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Materials include copies of journal articles; charts; conference agendas, announcements, participants lists, and reports; correspondence; blank forms; meeting agendas and minutes; notes; papers; publication materials; reports; rosters; statistics;

Archival Arrangement: Folders are arranged into three sub-series. Materials concerning Starfield's participation in professional societies and consultancies are in alphabetical order by organization name. Folders pertaining to her testimony in court hearings are kept together and arranged in date order by hearing date [this is the CV order]. Records pertaining to the role Starfield played as an external reviewer of colleagues and student projects are in a third sub-series and arranged in alphabetical order by name.

Sub-series 6.1: Professional Societies -- Memberships and Participation on Advisory Panels, Committees, and Consultancies

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: Includes materials concerning various research studies, papers, and health care policy projects on which Starfield served in an advisory capacity. Starfield served as an advisory panel member on projects with some organizations with which she did not have a significant affiliation. She also served as an advisor for many non-JHU student's thesis and provided feedback for projects by non-JHU students, fellow researchers, and writers.

Scope and Content: "Children's Health, The Nation's Wealth" – "Assuring Better Child Health and Development Act Bill" Scope note: The Committee on Evaluation of Children's Health produced a report titled, "Children's health, The Nation's Wealth: Assessing and Improving Child Health". This report was the basis for a bill introduced to Congress, the "Assuring Better Child Health and Development Act Bill." This bill sought to amend the Public Health Service Act; establish an advisory Council on Child Health Assessment; identify leading health indicators for children; set child health objectives; and coordinate Federal Government policies and activities related to measurement of children's health. Starfield contributed extensively to the project over a several year period.

Sub-sub-series 6.2.1: Suits in Maryland and Connecticut Regarding Poverty, Health care, and Equality in School Spending

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: School officials in Baltimore city and three poor, rural counties brought a suit against the County Board of Education claiming that students in poor counties were receiving an inferior education. They argued that the school-aid structure violated the equal protection clauses of the Maryland and U. S. constitutions as well as the state Constitution's mandate concerning public schooling. Starfield was asked by the lawyers for the plaintiffs to testify about the higher prevalence of health problems in urban poor children. She gave similar testimony for a case in the state of Connecticut.

Sub-sub-series 6.2.2: Infant Formula Testimony

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: In 1980 the Ambulatory Pediatric Association (APA) adopted a resolution expressing concern over use of breast milk substitutes with special concern related to the Nestles Corporation and its marketing practices. The membership adopted a resolution endorsing the WHO Code of Marketing of Infant Formula and urged U. S. officials to vote in favor of the code. In 1981 Resolutions calling for U. S. support of the Code were introduced in both houses of congress. The major infant formula manufacturers in the U. S. were opposed to adopting the code. Starfield was the immediate past president of the Ambulatory Pediatric Association in 1981 and gave expert testimony and spoke about the APA's position on breast feeding before the U. S. Department of Health and Human Services (Office of International Health) and the U. S. House of Representatives (Subcommittee on Domestic Marketing, Consumer Relations, and Nutrition). The U. S. was one of three countries to vote against the Code at the Federal Assembly of WHO.

Series 9: Transparencies and Slides

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: These materials provide a valuable and succinct reference point for Starfield's theories and research findings. They comprising outlines, lists, tables, graphs, charts and notes used by Starfield in her courses and for her many presentations. Speaking events include the JHU speakers series, talks at meetings of professional societies, and presentations given in other countries. The bulk of materials include transparencies, printouts of transparencies, and printouts of power point slides. Other materials include 35 mm slides, lantern slides, glossy prints, and negatives.

Several slides compare industrialized countries in Europe as well as Japan and the U. S. in terms of healthcare procedures, technology, and services. Within-country studies on primary care examine variations between states on several health services indicators. Materials also cover CHIP; PCAT; immigration and primary care; health policy and children; health and poverty; research design; and many other topics.

Series 10: Research Files

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Sub-series 10.1: Research Projects

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: Research Files pertain to Starfield's research projects, including initial ideas and preliminary research for studies. In addition to her major research projects and measurement tools, PCAT, CHIP, ACG, and ASI, Starfield studied, among other things, healthcare organizations' use of surveys of patient satisfaction with their healthcare, including surveying children; the relation of primary care residency training programs, as compared to traditional residency programs, to career choice; the impact of federal funding on primary care training in pediatrics; the impact of changes in funding policies on access to medical care for poor children; and national differences in health care service delivery. Materials include blank survey questionnaires; correspondence; data, data analyses, and blank data coding forms; definitions of terms; figures, graphs, & tables for papers; copies of completed grant applications and proposals; literature reviews; meeting minutes; notes; papers; presentation and conference materials; reports; and printouts of power point slides. These files contain many publication records including correspondence about publications, annotated manuscript drafts, galley proofs, peer reviews, and published articles.

Related Archival Materials Element: See also series 11, Publication files, which contain a large amount of research study materials; Series 4 for documents pertaining to CHIP, ACG, and PCAT; and sub-series 8.2 for international collaborative studies, including with the World Health Organization.

Sub-sub-series 10.1.02: Ambulatory Pediatric Association Research -- Project Child and Related Studies

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: The bulk of materials concern Project CHILD (Child Health and Illness Data) a study that was conducted in the 1980s by the Ambulatory Pediatric Association to obtain information on child health problems of major public concern and to determine the impact on poor children of changes in public policy concerning financial access to care. This study was a response to concerns about cutbacks in federally funded services. The project was based in several cities across the U. S. An aim of the study was to develop a network of practices (private practitioners, HMOs, Public clinics, health department, academic facilities) which would collaborate in providing data and sharing in the analyses of patterns of care, their effects, and their costs. At the time, Starfield was the Chair of the APA's Committee on Monitoring of Sentinel Events in Child Health Care.

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: This research was conducted under an HCFA contract (grant) to develop and test a risk adjuster and a risk adjustment methodology for application to the under 65 insured population. The risk adjuster was based on refinement and integration of two methodologies developed at JHU: the Ambulatory Care Group (ACG) case-mix measure and the Payment Amount for Capitated Systems (PACS) method. This project sought to complement another HCFA contract (by the same investigators at JHU) to develop and test an adjustment system for the over 65 Medicare population.

Series 11: Publication Files

Creator: Starfield, Barbara, 1932-2011

Scope and Content: The Starfield collection contains materials pertaining to many of Starfield's published articles, editorials, and books, as well as book chapters and some unpublished papers. Materials include clippings; copies of commentaries on articles written by Starfield and her responses; correspondence with colleagues, publishers, and researchers; research study data and data analyses; paper drafts; galley proofs; notes; and peer reviews. Correspondence includes letters from former president Bill Clinton and Clinton's senior advisor for Policy Development, Ira C. Magaziner pertaining to the Clinton Task Force materials. A citation for the publication to which the materials pertain is included as a scope note at the folder level, except for manuscripts that were never published.

Archival Arrangement: Materials are arranged into sub series by type of publication including journal articles, books and monographs, chapters, and editorial commentaries. There are also sub series for articles that have not been peer reviewed, commissioned reports, and website publications. This organization reflects the publication section of Starfield's syllabus. In addition there are sub series for papers that were never published, reprints, and a general file that includes publications-related materials that have not been sorted by publication.

Related Archival Materials Element: See also: Research Files, which contain publication files.
