Collection Overview

Extent: 5 boxes (6 cubic feet)

Creator: Bright, Margaret
Margaret Bright began her career at the United Nations Population Division Department of Social Affairs. She was the primary researcher of the 1953 work, "The Determinants and Consequences of Population Trends," a synthesis of world population data. She published some of the first analyses of race and sex disparities in morbidity. Abraham Lilienfeld recruited her to the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health in 1959, where she worked to blend social and behavioral science methods into the new field of chronic disease epidemiology, pioneering the use of demography to inform health planning. She was named full professor in 1970 and became a professor emeritus in 1983.
1960 - Assistant Professor of Public Health Administration -- Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health
