Collection Overview

Extent: 76 boxes (91 cubic feet)
Creator: Bang, Frederik B. (Frederik Barry), 1916-1981
Johns Hopkins Center for Medical Research and Training

Administrative/Biographical History:

Frederick B. Bang
5 Nov 1916-3 Oct 1981

Frederick B. Bang was born in Philadelphia. He received his A.B. from the Johns Hopkins University in 1935 and his M.D. from the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in 1939. From 1961 to 1976, he was director of the Johns Hopkins University Centers for Medical Research Training in Calcutta, India, and Dacca, Bangladesh. Along with Jack Levin, a hematologist at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Bang developed the limulus lysate test, which is used to diagnose infections caused by bacteria that produce endotoxins. In the early 1950s he was one of the first physicians to use electron microscopy to study viruses and was a pioneer in the application of marine biology to medical research.

Johns Hopkins Center for Medical Research and Training was administered by the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health and directed by Frederick Bang. The center was based in in Calcutta, India, and Dacca, Bangladesh.

Scope and Content:

Records include reports, reprints, financial records, correspondence, grant files, photographs, and other administrative records of the Center. Included are records of its director Frederick Bang and assistant director Craig Wallace.

Archival Arrangement:

Collection is part of the Medical Archives' Records Management program stored offsite. Boxes have not yet been organized into a logical arrangement plan. Some boxes have folder level inventories. Inventories of additional boxes can be created upon request.

Conditions Governing Access Element:

Selected boxes and folders have been screened to identify confidential information (CI) and protected health information (PHI). Documents within the collection with restrictions on access are noted on folder level records.
